One of my favorite parts of the “Emily is a fed” criticism is that when the decision was made to not show up on August 11, I was asked to call the cops to tell them about the torch march, and I refused.

There were quite a lot of antifascist groups in Virginia when August 11 happened. Yet somehow there were only about 30-40 people at UVA, most students and community members.

Instead of mutual aid, we were explicitly expected to rely on the cops.

We're one BLM protest away from martial law. That's not a dig on BLM, either.
This administration acts with the prudence of a drunk teenager

A lifetime cap on Medicaid would be a literal death sentence for thousands. They know this, and are pushing for it anyway - because they do not care who, other than themselves, lives or dies.

This is actual Nazism at work. The argument that the disabled are a burden on society, too expensive to keep alive, with lives not really worth living, justified the first Nazi mass killing. And now Trump and Pence are starting to make it into policy.

Remember when a victim of Nazi violence politely asked Quinn Norton to consider not minimizing their violence and she got defensive and claimed the survivor came at her? I do.

I normally wouldn't care. But the NYT seems to optimize for Nazi apologetics these days.

Emily G. Cville.  @EmilyGorcenski · 1h

I don't really have it out for Quinn. She's a survivor and I wish her well. I also wish her to stop being a Nazi apologist. I only even replied at her because I figured she'd have empathy. I was wrong. But I have no intent to drag her.

I don't think I'll actually feel good if Quinn Norton is dropped by the NYT.

I want an outcome that addresses those pasts and uplifts her good work. I want outcomes that are better than outright disposability.

At the same time, there are Women of Color who'd fit that role, too.

This is what it really gets down to for me. It's the New York Times. They need to be better than this. This is their job.

its pretty fucking awful that the NYT couldn't do basic searches and subjected Quinn to essentially a public roasting, shes gone through some shit and also said some dumb shit but this is like basic professional practice it's incredible

So, a thing to know about protesting.
Whatever you think the law says doesn't matter. Whatever the law really says doesn't matter.

Cops will do what they want, when they want, with impunity. We've seen cops shoot black people dead unprovoked on video and nothing happens.

If you get arrested and charged, you might stand a chance in the courts if you have evidence and a lawyer.

But perceived or actual knowledge of the law, in the moment, won't do you any good. You can't "well actually" a cop in riot gear.

Resist. Escape. Evade.

Know the protest route. Know the area. Study maps before you go. Know what businesses are open.

Pay attention to where you are and where the police are stationed during the peaceful parts.

Over the past few years police forces have perfected crowd management techniques, setting closures and blockages, then moving them.
